

How to Construct an Argument Essay:

1. Have students read three articles on a topic (a prompt) to construct an argument essay.
2. Give students a copy of the chart above to write on. Initially you can print a copy for each student then once they become proficient, take the chart away and have them replicate it from memory.
3. The first three boxes at the top is the introduction paragraph consisting of the HOOK, BACKGROUND, and THESIS.
4. Upon completion of the introduction, students begin the body paragraphs using the acronym TTEDEC. This stands for Transition, Topic sentence, which comes from the thesis. Explain the topic sentence by adding more about what it means. Quote from the articles. Explain the quote and why it's important/ how does it relate to the topic then Close or do a Counter argument.
5. The last step on the chart is the conclusion paragraph. TRP is the acronym. This means Transition, Restate the thesis statement differently, and a Proposed statement that looks at how the issue from the prompt could either impact the community, the world or the future.
6. Students are to review what they have written in the chart then transfer the information into a written essay – part by part.

Note: You must spend a few days explaining the essay process and what each part of the essay is and does.

PSA Argument Essay Prompt:

With the rapid pace of modern technology, especially the internet, personal data is being shared with companies and other agencies. Even in our school systems, often, personal data on students is being shared for “educational purposes.” Read the accompanying texts and decide for yourself whether you think the sharing of data on students is an invasion of privacy, or do you think that it will help teachers and parents better educate students?
