

Argumentative essay on reality TV shows

Write a persuasive or argumentative essay responding to a statement that raises a debatable issue and that asks you to take a position on that issue.

Introduction

Reality television has become a cultural phenomenon in recent years, offering viewers a unique glimpse into the lives of ordinary people. While some argue that these shows provide entertainment and insight into human behavior, others contend that they promote unrealistic standards and exploit participants for profit. This essay will argue that reality television is a harmful and exploitative industry that should be regulated or banned.

Reality television shows often depict contestants in highly artificial and staged environments, where they are forced to interact with each other in ways that are not natural. This can lead to a distorted view of human behavior and relationships. Furthermore, the shows often exploit participants by paying them large sums of money for a short period of time, only to leave them with no support or resources after the show ends.

Many reality shows also promote a narrow and often unrealistic view of beauty and success. Contestants are often judged on their physical appearance, and those who are deemed "winners" are often portrayed as the ideal of beauty and success. This can lead to a distorted view of reality and a harmful impact on the mental health of viewers.

Another major problem with reality television is the exploitation of contestants. Many contestants are paid large sums of money for a short period of time, only to be left with no support or resources after the show ends. This can lead to a cycle of poverty and exploitation, as contestants are often left with no other options for earning money.

Regulating reality television shows could help to protect contestants from exploitation and ensure that they are treated fairly. This could include requiring shows to provide contestants with support and resources after the show ends, as well as limiting the amount of money that contestants can be paid. Additionally, regulating the content of the shows could help to ensure that they do not promote unrealistic standards or exploit participants.

Third language acquisition Camilla Bardel, Laura Sánchez, This book deals with the phenomenon of third language L3 acquisition. As a research field, L3 acquisition is established as a branch of multilingualism that is concerned with how multilinguals learn additional languages and the role that their multilingual background plays in the process of language learning. The volume points out some current directions in this particular research area with a number of studies that reveal the complexity of multilingual language learning and its typical variation and dynamics. The eight studies gathered in the book represent a wide range of theoretical positions and offer empirical evidence from learners belonging to different age groups and with varying levels of proficiency in the target language as well as in other non-native languages belonging to the learner's repertoire. Diverse linguistic phenomena and language combinations are viewed from a perspective where all previously acquired languages have a potential role to play in the process of learning a new language. In the six empirical studies, contexts of language learning in school or at university level constitute the main outlet for data collection. These studies involve several language backgrounds and language combinations and focus on various linguistic features. The specific target languages in the empirical studies are English, French, and Italian. The volume also includes two theoretical chapters. The first one conceptualizes and describes the different types of multilingual language learning investigated in the volume: i) third or additional language learning by learners who are bilinguals from an early age and ii) third or additional language learning by people who have previous experience of one or more non-native languages learned after the critical period. In particular, issues related to the roles played by age and proficiency in multilingual acquisition are discussed. The other theoretical chapter conceptualizes the grammatical category of aspect, reviewing previous studies on second and third language acquisition of aspect. Different models for L3 learning and their relevance and implications for representations of aspect and for potential differences in the processing of second and third language acquisition are also examined in this chapter. As a whole the book presents current research into third or additional language learning by young learners or adults considering some of the most important factors for the complex process of multilingual language learning the age of onset of the additional language and that of previously acquired languages social and affective factors instruction language proficiency and literacy the typology of the background languages and the role they play in shaping syntax lexicon and other components of a L3 The idea for this book emanates from the symposium Multilingualism language proficiency and age organized by Camilla Bardel and Laura Sánchez at Stockholm University Department of Language Education in December 2016 All
