

Argumentative Essays

Argumentative essays often deal with complex and controversial issues, where choosing a side is not just a matter of common sense or easy moral judgment. It differs from an opinion (or expository) essay in that you cannot rely on widely held assumptions or personal experience to argue your points. When writing this type of essay, you must clearly state a position and defend it using evidence obtained through extensive research. Your task, therefore, is to persuade the reader that your position, or thesis, is valid through your analysis of evidence from a variety of sources.

Structure

Your position must be boiled down into a single sentence called the thesis statement in your essay's introduction. Your introduction should also list the main arguments you'll use to prove your thesis, thus conveying a sense of your essay's organization and development. The body of your essay does the heavy lifting by providing relevant evidence and, most importantly, your analysis. Never present quotes or figures on their own and assume that the evidence will speak for itself. The conclusion plays a vital role in persuading the reader. By the end of your paper, your claim will have been supported with ample evidence, so restate your thesis with a confidence that reflects this. Succinctly summarize your main points and, in the last sentence of your paper, "zoom out" to reveal your topic's importance in a wider context. Your conclusion should not convey any new information or arguments.

Don't inform, persuade! Don't describe, argue!

Keep in mind that while the reader should come away from your essay knowing more than s/he did before, your job is not simply to inform her/him about your topic. Before you begin writing, ask yourself questions such as "how and why would someone reject my position and how might I respond?" and "what types of evidence are most likely to persuade my reader?" As your goal is to influence the reader's view on your topic, use a strategic approach to obtain the desired result.

Persuasion through refutation

To appear credible, ethical and unbiased (and therefore persuade your reader), you must be able to 1) fairly evaluate arguments that contradict your thesis and then 2) refute those arguments. One or more of your body paragraphs can be committed to this task. Be careful not to be dismissive towards opposing points of view. Your essay should give the impression that you've considered all sides of an issue and that, in light of your research, have chosen the stronger position.

Consider your audience

While you can generally assume your reader is your teacher or a well-informed peer, you may be asked to write an argumentative paper for a specific audience. For example, if you are trying to convince an expert as opposed to someone with only casual knowledge of your topic, the types of evidence and even the terms you use will differ. If writing for a hostile audience (people who you expect will disagree with you), you have to work harder to anticipate counter-
