

Pro-Choice and Pro-Life: The Surrounding Argument of Abortion

The attitude towards abortion has always been and still is a heavily debated topic. The worldview on abortion has however changed throughout history. Abortion is a complex issue with two specific points of view and many opinions that overlap each other from both sides of the spectrum. No matter what either side has to say ultimately, it's up to our nations as well as states leaders to put laws in place that surround this pressing issue.

The definition of abortion, according to Webster dictionary, is: "the termination of pregnancy after, accompanied by, resulting in, or closely followed by the death of the embryo or fetus." There are two types of ways a woman could go about having an abortion if it were to be an option she chooses. One is an In-Clinic abortion. During this procedure, a doctor would use medical instruments and suction to remove the embryo/fetus from the womb. This procedure works more than 99% of the time and usually takes about 10 min to complete but the appointment time usually lasts a few hours. The second type is by taking a pill that would end the pregnancy, mimicking an early miscarriage.

The success rate for this method depends on how far along the mother is into the pregnancy, but even as far as 10 weeks the pill works 91-93% of the time. For this method, a doctor would give two pills to the mother and they will take these two pills up to two days apart, most of the time the abortion is over 24 hours after the second set of pills is taken. However, both of the procedures usually require the patient to go to a health center for separate visits, and abortions that happen later in the pregnancy may take longer and require more visits to health centers. Both the in-clinic and medicated abortions are very safe. According to planned parenthood, abortion is one of the safest medical procedures practiced. Serious problems after an abortion aren't common, and in fact pretty rare. But like any medical procedure, there could be risks.

After an abortion, most people feel fine within a day or two, but it's common to expect bleeding to last for a week (sometimes several weeks if you choose to use the pill). Most even go about normal activities the next day, but will need as much rest as possible. There isn't a right or wrong way to feel after an abortion. Each person experiences something different with a wide range of emotions from relief all the way to regret. If there were ever to be complications or emotional problems the procedure, doctors always give you after care instructions and a phone number just in case, not to mention there will be follow up appointments with your health care clinics. Overall the procedure is safe and there isn't any risk to a patient being able to have children in the future.

It's not just enough to know how the procedure works and the risks that could come about, but it's important to know the history and laws that surround this social issue. Abortion and th
