Algebraic Complexity Theory Peter Bürgisser,Michael Clausen,Mohammad A. Shokrollahi,2013-03-14 The algorithmic solution of problems has always been one of the major concerns of mathematics For a long time such solutions were based on an intuitive notion of algorithm It is only in this century that metamathematical problems have led to the intensive search for a precise and sufficiently general formalization of the notions of computability and algorithm In the 1930s a number of quite different concepts for this purpose were proposed such as Turing machines WHILE programs recursive functions Markov algorithms and Thue systems All these concepts turned out to be equivalent a fact summarized in Church's thesis which says that the resulting definitions form an adequate formalization of the intuitive notion of computability This had and continues to have an enormous effect First of all with these notions it has been possible to prove that various problems are algorithmically unsolvable Among of group these undecidable problems are the halting problem the word problem theory the Post correspondence problem and Hilbert's tenth problem Secondly concepts like Turing machines and WHILE programs had a strong influence on the development of the first computers and programming languages In the era of digital computers the question of finding efficient solutions to algorithmically solvable problems has become increasingly important In addition the fact that some problems can be solved very efficiently while others seem to defy all attempts to find an efficient solution has called for a deeper understanding of the intrinsic computational difficulty of problems
