

ANSI/ASME A13.1

Latest Revision ANSI / ASME A13.1

ANSI / ASME A13.1 is the most common pipe identification standard used in the United States. The standard specifies the primary and secondary means of identifying pipe content, as well as, the size, color and placement of the identification device.

1. Primary Identification

The legend (name of pipe content) and directional flow arrow remain the primary means of identifying pipe content. The size and placement of the marker and arrow has not changed. See ANSI / ASME size table and installation recommendations for details.

Legends should use arrows to indicate direction of flow. Where flow can be in both directions, arrows in both directions should be displayed. Contents should be identified by a legend with sufficient additional details such as temperature, pressure, as are necessary. Legends should be brief, informative, pointed, and simple for greatest effectiveness.

1.1 Additional Means of Identification ASME A13.1

ASME A13.1 incorporated the GHS pictograms into the 2015 revision and has recommended their use as part of the legend.

"The applicable GHS pictograms as illustrated in Fig. 1 may be included as part of the legend. Where piping is connected to containers that are labeled in accordance with GHS requirements, a corresponding label on the piping may be provided. The corresponding label should contain at least the product name or identifier, the pictogram, the signal word, and the physical, health and environmental hazard statements."

2. Secondary Identification

ASME A13.1 4.2 Color: "Color should be used to identify the characteristic hazards of the contents. Color should be displayed on, or contiguous to, the piping by any physical means, but its use shall be in combination with a legend. Color may be used in continuous, total-length coverage or in intermittent displays. Colors preceded by the word "Safety" shall meet the requirements of ANSI/NEMA Z535.7"

Flammable Fluids: Used for fluids that, under ambient or expected operating conditions, are a vapor or produce vapors that can be ignited and continue to burn in air. The term thus may apply, depending on service conditions, to fluids defined for other purposes as flammable or combustible.

Oxidizing Fluids: Oxidizing fluid is any gas or liquid that may, generally by providing oxygen, cause or contribute to the combustion of other material more than air does.

Fire Quenching Fluids: This classification includes water, foam and CO2 used in sprinkler systems and fire fighting piping systems.

Toxic & Corrosive Fluids: This classification includes fluids that are corrosive or toxic, or will produce corrosive or toxic substances when released.

Combustible Fluids: This classification includes fluids that can burn, but are not flammable.
