

Unit 3: Completing the Accounting Cycle
BAF3M: Accounting

Declining Balance Depreciation:
Practice Problem

Exercise 1

Calculate the Depreciation Expense/Accumulated Depreciation for the assets in each of the questions below.

- a) A new machine was bought on Jan. 1, 2018 for $54 000. It is depreciated at a rate of 20%.

|               | Beginning Capital Cost | CCA Rate | Depreciation Expense | Ending Capital Cost |
|---------------|------------------------|----------|----------------------|---------------------|
| 2018          |                        |          |                      |                     |
| 2019          |                        |          |                      |                     |
| 2020          |                        |          |                      |                     |
| 2021          |                        |          |                      |                     |
| 2022          |                        |          |                      |                     |
| Totals |                        |          |                      |                     |

Why is it appropriate to use a rate of 20% for machinery?

Because the rate provided by the CRA is not defined; we depreciate at 20% for all assets not provided a specific level of depreciation.

- b) A new building was bought July 1, 2018 for $282 000. It is depreciated at a rate of 4 %.
Assume that the half-year rule was used!

|               | Beginning Capital Cost | Amount Allowed for Depreciation | CCA Rate | Depreciation Expense | Ending Capital Cost |
|---------------|------------------------|---------------------------------|----------|----------------------|---------------------|
| 2018          |                        |                                 |          |                      |                     |
| 2019          |                        |                                 |          |                      |                     |
| 2020          |                        |                                 |          |                      |                     |
| 2021          |                        |                                 |          |                      |                     |
| 2022          |                        |                                 |          |                      |                     |
