

THE SKELETON
The skeleton is the framework of the body, supporting the soft organs and tissues. It is composed of bones and cartilage. The bones are made of a hard, white, mineralized substance called bone tissue. The cartilage is a soft, flexible tissue that connects the bones. The skeleton is divided into the axial skeleton (skull, spine, and rib cage) and the appendicular skeleton (arms and legs).

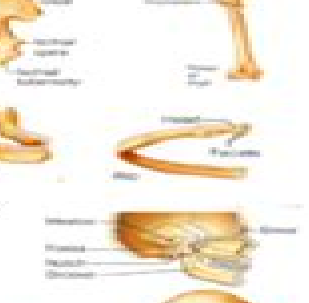

THE MUSCLES
The muscles are the soft tissue that contracts to move the bones. They are made of muscle fibers that are connected by a network of nerves. The muscles are divided into the skeletal muscles (attached to bones) and the smooth muscles (found in internal organs).

THE NERVOUS SYSTEM
The nervous system is the control system of the body. It is composed of the brain, spinal cord, and nerves. The brain is the center of the nervous system, and it sends signals to the muscles and organs. The spinal cord is a long, thin, tube-like structure that runs down the back. The nerves are thin, thread-like structures that branch out from the spinal cord to the rest of the body.

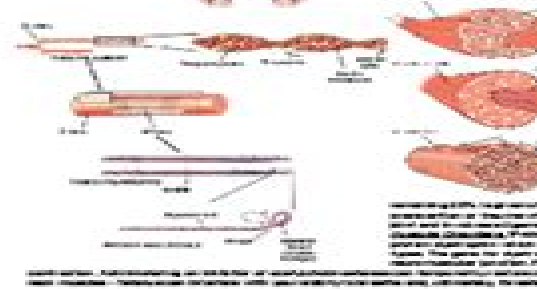

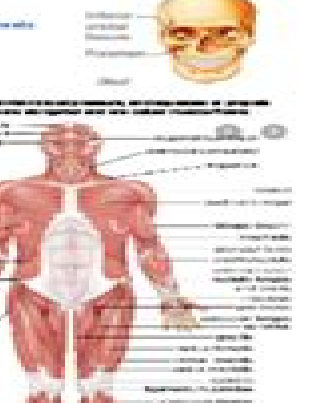

THE JOINTS
The joints are the points where two or more bones meet. They allow the bones to move relative to each other. There are three main types of joints: fibrous joints, cartilaginous joints, and synovial joints. Fibrous joints are made of fibrous tissue and are found between the bones of the skull. Cartilaginous joints are made of cartilage and are found between the vertebrae. Synovial joints are the most common type of joint and are found between the bones of the arms and legs.

THE SKELETON AND MUSCLES
The skeleton and muscles work together to move the body. The bones provide a rigid framework, and the muscles provide the force to move the bones. The nervous system controls the muscles by sending signals to them. The muscles are attached to the bones by tendons, which are made of fibrous tissue.

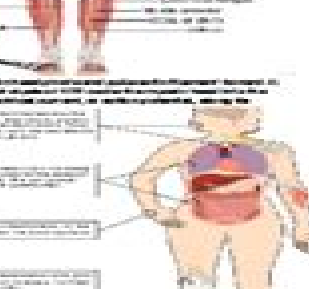

THE MUSCLES AND JOINTS
The muscles and joints work together to move the body. The muscles contract to pull on the bones, and the joints allow the bones to move. The nervous system controls the muscles by sending signals to them. The muscles are attached to the bones by tendons, which are made of fibrous tissue.

THE NERVOUS SYSTEM AND MUSCLES
The nervous system and muscles work together to move the body. The nervous system sends signals to the muscles, and the muscles contract to move the bones. The nervous system is made up of the brain, spinal cord, and nerves. The muscles are made up of muscle fibers that are connected by a network of nerves.
