

THE SKELETON
The skeleton is the framework of the body, supporting the soft organs and protecting them. It is composed of bones and cartilage. The bones are made of a hard, white, mineralized substance called bone tissue. The cartilage is a soft, white, jelly-like substance. The skeleton is divided into the axial skeleton (skull, spine, and rib cage) and the appendicular skeleton (arms and legs).

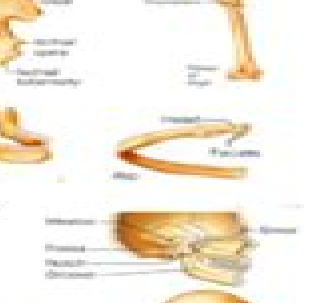

THE MUSCLES
The muscles are the soft tissue that contracts to move the bones. They are made of muscle fibers. The muscles are divided into the skeletal muscles (attached to bones) and the smooth muscles (not attached to bones). The skeletal muscles are voluntary, meaning they can be controlled by the conscious mind. The smooth muscles are involuntary, meaning they cannot be controlled by the conscious mind.

THE JOINTS
The joints are the points where two or more bones meet. They allow the bones to move relative to each other. There are three main types of joints: fibrous joints, cartilaginous joints, and synovial joints. Fibrous joints are the least movable, cartilaginous joints are slightly more movable, and synovial joints are the most movable.

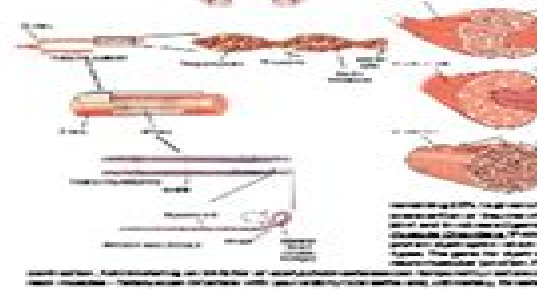

THE NERVOUS SYSTEM
The nervous system is the control system of the body. It is composed of the brain, spinal cord, and nerves. The brain is the central part of the nervous system, and it sends out signals to the rest of the body. The spinal cord is the main pathway for these signals, and the nerves are the branches that carry the signals to the muscles and organs.

THE ENDOCRINE SYSTEM
The endocrine system is the chemical messenger system of the body. It is composed of the glands that secrete hormones. The hormones are chemical messengers that travel through the bloodstream to the target organs. The target organs then respond to the hormones by changing their function.

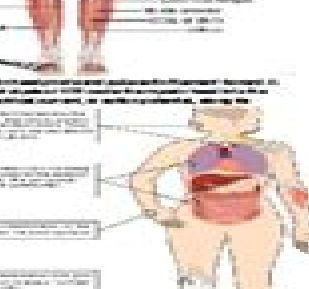

THE IMMUNE SYSTEM
The immune system is the body's defense system. It is composed of the cells and organs that fight off infection. The cells are the white blood cells, and the organs are the lymph nodes, spleen, and thymus. The immune system is constantly working to protect the body from disease.

THE DIGESTIVE SYSTEM
The digestive system is the system that breaks down food into nutrients that the body can use. It is composed of the mouth, esophagus, stomach, and intestines. The nutrients are then absorbed into the bloodstream and used by the body for energy and growth.

THE REPRODUCTIVE SYSTEM
The reproductive system is the system that produces offspring. It is composed of the testes in males and the ovaries in females. The reproductive system is responsible for the production and development of the gametes (sperm and egg cells).

THE EXCRETORY SYSTEM
The excretory system is the system that removes waste from the body. It is composed of the kidneys, ureters, and bladder. The kidneys filter the blood, and the bladder stores the urine until it is excreted from the body.
