

Chapter 14 Vocab

Financial statement analysis - The examination of both the relationships among financial statement numbers and the trends in those numbers over time

Financial ratios - Relationships between financial statement amounts

Debt ratio - A measure of leverage; equal to total liabilities divided by total assets

Liquidity - A company's ability to pay its debts in the short run

Current ratio - A measure of the liquidity of a business; equal to current assets divided by current liabilities

Return on sales - A measure of the amount of profit earned per dollar of sales; equal to net income divided by sales

Asset turnover - A measure of company efficiency; equal to sales divided by total assets

Return on equity (ROE) - A measure of the amount of profit earned per dollar of investment; equal to net income divided by equity

Price-earnings (PE) ratio - A measure of growth potential, earnings stability, and management capabilities; equal to market value divided by net income

Common-size financial statements - Financial statements achieved by dividing all financial statement numbers by total sales for the year

DuPont framework - A systematic approach for breaking down return on equity into three ratios; return on sales, asset turnover, and asset-to-equity ratio

Assets-to-equity ratio - A measure of the number of dollars of assets a company is able to acquire using each dollar of equity; calculated by dividing assets by equity

Leverage - Borrowing that allows a company to purchase more assets than its stockholders are able to pay for through their own investment

Accounts receivable turnover - A measure used to indicate how fast a company collects its receivables; equal to sales divided by average accounts receivable

Average collection period - A measure of the average number of days it takes to collect a credit sale; equal to 365 divided by accounts receivable turnover
