Procedure

1. Revalidation Categories

1.1. Process Revalidation

With the exception of sterile/aseptic processes, process revalidation is NOT frequent as validated status is maintained via a change control process. The need for any revalidation outside of the change control process will be considered in response to repeated or unexplained batch failures or any adverse analytical trends.

1.2. Cleaning Revalidation

There is NO need to revalidate the process unless it is clear that the effectiveness of the cleaning procedures is inadequate or where significant changes in the manufacturing equipment or process have occurred.

1.3. Analytical Methods Revalidation

The routine revalidation of analytical methods is NOT necessary. Revalidation will therefore normally result from the recurrence of analytical problems or excessive out of specification results associated with the analytical method.

1.4. Revalidation of Pharmacopelial methods is NOT necessary, but need to verify when such methods are updated

1.5. Equipment and Systems Re-qualification

If the Equipment/system has NOT been to subject to any major change or repeated unexplained failures the Equipment/system is considered to remain qualified and NO need for revalidation.

2. Initiation

2.1. It is the responsibility of the Validation Committee to provide an overall plan describing and defining the subject for revalidation based on the initial Validation of the equipment/process/system. The criticality of the equipment/process/system, plus a knowledge of its inherent tendency to change, are considered when establishing the equipment/process/system revalidation programme. The revalidation requirements are documented as part of the Validation report at the time of initial validation but may be modified over time when further knowledge of the equipment/process/system is gained.

2.2. Revalidation is required by the cGMP to be carried out on annual basis on all critical processes or when significant changes have been made to the equipment/process/system. Revalidation activities are usually preceded by a major preventative maintenance/calibration programme conducted by the Maintenance Department.

National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Panel on Statistical Methods for Testing and Evaluating Defense Systems, 1999-09-17 The Panel on Statistical Methods for Testing and Evaluating Defense Systems had a broad mandate to examine the use of statistics in conjunction with defense testing. This involved examining methods for software testing, reliability test planning, and estimation, validation of modeling and simulation, and use of modern techniques for experimental design. Given the breadth of these areas, including the great variety of applications and special issues that arise, making a contribution in each of these areas required that the Panel's work and recommendations be at a relatively general level. However a variety of more specific research issues were either brought to the Panel's attention by members of the test and acquisition community e.g. what was referred to as Dublin's challenge addressed in the Panel's interim report or were identified by members of the panel. In many of these cases the panel thought that a more in depth analysis or a more detailed application of suggestions or recommendations made by the Panel would either be useful as input to its deliberations or could be used to help communicate more individual views of members of the Panel to the defense test community. This resulted in several research efforts. Given various criteria especially immediate relevance to the test and acquisition community the Panel has decided to make available three technical or background papers each authored by a Panel member jointly with a colleague. These papers are individual contributions and are not a consensus product of the Panel however the Panel has drawn from these papers in preparation of its final report.

Statistics Testing and Defense Acquisition The Panel has found each of these papers to be extremely useful and they are strongly recommended to readers of the Panel's final report.

Revalidation of doctors Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Health Committee, 2011-02-08. The Committee says the GMC should be accountable to Parliament. The GMC is formally accountable to the Privy Council but in the absence of a mechanism which makes this accountability effective the MPs intend to exercise this function themselves on behalf of Parliament.

Revalidation of doctors has been under discussion for over 10 years. This is considered too long the GMC is expected to ensure that there are no further delays and that the current target date of late 2012 is achieved. Reviewing the GMC's current proposals MPs warn that too little attention has been given to the issue of how to deal with doctors whose practice gives cause for concern. The Committee is also concerned that the use of the word remediation may have the effect of pre-judging the appropriate response to a particular set of circumstances. In relation to appraisal systems MPs broadly support the proposal that revalidation should be based on the conclusions of employers' appraisal systems. However there is evidence showing that the record of employers on appraisal is patchy and the importance of patient and colleague involvement in the appraisal process is emphasised. MPs also felt there should be clear guidance about how Responsible Officers should act when a conflict of interest arises between their responsibility to their employer and their responsibility to the GMC. Finally the issue of doctors for whom English is a second language was considered. As the body responsible for revalidation and with a commitment to introducing it by late 2012 the GMC is expected to satisfy itself that it has the necessary powers to fulfil this role. If it is not satisfied it needs to say so publicly and report to Parliament what changes are necessary to allow it to fulfil its function effectively.
