Identifying Atoms and Ions

Journey into the Atom Part A - Atomic Structure

Pre-Activity Questions:

How do you find the atomic mass of an element if you know the number of protons and neutrons?

How do you determine the charge an atom has?

Introduction:

Atoms are composed of subatomic particles, such as the protons and the neutrons, which make up the nucleus of the atom and are similar in mass, and electrons, which are found orbiting the nucleus in an electron cloud and have a negligible mass. All atoms contain the same kinds of particles but may differ in the number of each particle. This accounts for the presence of isotopes and ions for the different elements.

This activity will allow you to use what you know about the composition of the atom, as well as isotopes and ions, to describe sixteen atoms. The atoms are contained in Petri Dishes and the subatomic particles are coded as follows:

Protons – Black Beads

Neutrons – Green Beads

Electrons – Marked on the Back of the Dish and on the title of the picture

To use your time wisely, complete the first 3 columns of your table (# of protons, neutrons and electrons) before you complete the rest of the table.***

Objective:

Students will collect data and relate number of subatomic particles to atomic number, mass number, electrical charge, atomic symbol, and name of element.

Procedure:

Analyze each dish (atom) and record its vital statistics in the data table provided.

AFTER YOU COMPLETE THE ENTIRE TABLE, ANSWER THE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS:

Data Analysis:

1. List the isotopes that are on your table. How do you know they are isotopes?
2. List the ions that are on your table. How do you know they are ions?
