3. Undersubscription of shares occurs when a company offers a certain number of shares for sale to the public through an initial public offering (IPO), a follow-on offering, or a rights issue, but investors are not willing to purchase the full allotment of shares that the company intended to sell.

4. The double-entry system of accounting is a fundamental method where each financial transaction is recorded with at least two corresponding entries in different accounts. These entries ensure that for every debit recorded, there is a corresponding credit, maintaining the balance between assets, liabilities, and equity.

5. SOPL - Statement of Profit and Loss: The Statement of Profit and Loss, also known as the Income Statement or P&L Statement, is a financial report that provides a summary of a company's revenues, expenses, and resulting profit or loss over a specific period, usually a fiscal quarter or year.

SOPF - Statement of Financial Position: The Statement of Financial Position, commonly referred to as the Balance Sheet, presents a snapshot of a company's financial health at a specific point in time. It details the company's assets, liabilities, and equity.

6. When some of the shareholders are unable to pay allotment money or call money, their shares are forfeited by the company. After the forfeiture, the company can reissue the shares. The company can reissue the shares of previous allottees at par, at a premium, or discount. Usually, these shares are reissued at a discount (at a price less than the face value of the share).

7. Cumulative preference shares are a type of preference shares where if the company is unable to pay dividends in a particular year, the unpaid dividends accumulate and must be paid in the future years before any dividends are distributed to common shareholders. This type of share gives its holders the assurance of eventually receiving their dividends even if there are temporary financial setbacks.

8. A debenture is a type of long-term debt instrument issued by a company or government entity to raise capital. It represents a formal promise to repay the borrowed amount, along with periodic interest payments, and is typically backed by the issuer's general credit rather than specific assets.

9. Fractional shares refer to a situation where an investor owns a portion of a share of stock that is less than a whole share. Fractional shares can arise from activities like stock splits, dividend reinvestment programs, or buying shares through certain investment platforms that allow for fractional investing.

10. The principle of objectivity in accounting refers to the concept that financial information and transactions should be recorded and reported in a neutral, unbiased, and factual manner. This principle requires that accounting professionals present information based on verifiable evidence and avoid personal biases or opinions.
