Question: What else can we learn from stellar spectra?

1. Observe: Observe the spectra of stars 5 – 10. Identify the elements in each spectrum, and try to classify each star. If you notice unusual features in these spectra, describe them.

| Star | Color      | Elements in spectrum                                | Class | Unusual features                                                                                              |

| 5    | Yellow     | None of the elements match                          | G     | Similar to sodium's double line, however they are displaced                                                   |
| 6    | Red        | Neutral titanium oxide and neutral iron (not shown) | M     | The neutral magnesium does not fit since it has some more pronounced black lines than the original magnesium. |
| 7    | Blue-White | Hydrogen, Neutral helium                            | B     | Normal                                                                                                        |
| 8    | Yellow     | Calcium, Neutral sodium                             | G     | The light flickers, moves up and down, and there are some unfamiliar dark lines in the neutral sodium.        |
| 9    | White      | Ionized calcium, Hydrogen, Neutral sodium           | F     | Calcium did not match neither ionized or neutral, besides moving sometimes                                    |
| 10   | Yellow     | Calcium, Neutral sodium                             | G     | Normal                                                                                                        |

Match: Write the number of the star or object that matches each description. Then use this information to help you identify the elements and reclassify the stars in the table above.

| 3 | High atmospheric pressures in a star cause spectral lines to be broadened, or "smeared out." Giant stars , which have relatively low atmospheric pressures, are characterized by narrow spectral lines. |
| 2 | If a star is moving away from an observer, spectral lines are redshifted , or shifted toward the red end of the spectrum. An approaching star is blueshifted .                                   |
| 8 | A star orbited by a large planet will move in a small circle. This will cause its spectrum to be slightly redshifted part of the time and blueshifted at other times.                                          |
