The Probability

Lesson 1: Probability of Independent Events

Student Learning Objectives

Students will be able to determine the probability of two independent events occurring together.

1. Independent Events
- a. The probability of two independent events occurring together is the product of the probabilities of each event occurring. For example, if the probability of event A occurring is $\frac{1}{2}$ and the probability of event B occurring is $\frac{1}{3}$, then the probability of both events occurring together is $\frac{1}{2} \times \frac{1}{3} = \frac{1}{6}$.
- b. Two events are independent if the occurrence of one event does not affect the probability of the other event occurring. For example, flipping a coin and rolling a die are independent events.
- c. A tree diagram can be used to determine the probability of two independent events occurring together. For example, if the probability of event A occurring is $\frac{1}{2}$ and the probability of event B occurring is $\frac{1}{3}$, then the probability of both events occurring together is $\frac{1}{2} \times \frac{1}{3} = \frac{1}{6}$.
2. Dependent Events
- a. When two events are dependent, the probability of the second event occurring is affected by the occurrence of the first event. For example, drawing two cards from a deck without replacement are dependent events.
- b. Conditional probability is the probability of an event occurring given that another event has already occurred. For example, the probability of drawing a second card of a certain color given that the first card drawn was a certain color.

- c. The probability of two dependent events occurring together is the product of the probability of the first event occurring and the conditional probability of the second event occurring given that the first event has occurred.
