Abstract: The article discusses the importance of the Observation: I would think a small amount of tissue manipulating techniques, along with a microscope, taking the cells with a micropipette, spin off the unwanted parts so carefully and then use a hand-held centrifuge to create the microsome products rather than centrifuged with.

Discussion: E. coli possesses numerous mechanisms, and transcription factors are increasingly found in this bacterium to regulate virulence. EHEC may therefore have a greater regulatory network. It is thus likely that transcription control mechanisms in EHEC are more complex. The observed control of EHEC virulence genes via transcription and σ factor action are the subject of our future researches. It is also interesting to note that
