daughter Lucile Phoebe has been reprinting the couple's love letters in her column. She joins Lucile now an elderly woman at the gala's main event: the unveiling of a long painted over mural. Lucile is visibly upset when the mural is revealed; in fact she seems horrified. Before passing out from fear she whispers: "The evil has been released."

My First Theft Went a Little Like This Isla Chiu, 2020-12-11
My first theft went a little like this: I just wanted to steal one bag of chips. Instead I end up stealing the heart of a handsome millionaire. WORD COUNT: 4100
Excerpt: My pulse races. How do I get out of this? It's not like I can fight off the man. He is way taller than me and appears to be hiding a muscular body in his gray suit. And he is good looking, which is completely irrelevant, but I'm not blind. Silky brown hair, intense violet eyes that could undress you with ease, and you would like it, and a jawline that you could cut stone on. Um, hey, what's that? I point. "Lame. I know, but it works in the movies. Of course he doesn't fall for it. Do I look like an idiot?" I give him my best puppy dog eyes. "Maybe I can appeal to this rich guy's heart. If he has a heart, I'm hungry. He rolls his eyes. "Nice try. I own this store. Do you think I would be able to make a living if I let every hobo take free food from me? I don't know, but it'd make you a really nice person." His eyes are cold. I'd rather be rich, thanks. My voice is small. "Please, I need to eat. I should drag you to the police station. Does this guy not have a soul? Well, I guess you have to be soulless if you're charging people 7 dollars for a bag of chips. Um, panicking and desperate, I pull him in for a kiss. He freezes instead of pushing me away. When he starts kissing me back and tries to wrap his arms around me, I jump away from him and run as fast as I can."

Why Love Hurts Eva Illouz, 2013-05-20
Few of us have been spared the agonies of intimate relationships. They come in many shapes: loving a man or a woman who will not commit to us; being heartbroken when we're abandoned by a lover; engaging in Sisyphean internet searches; coming back lonely from bars, parties, or blind dates; feeling bored in a relationship that is so much less than we had envisaged. These are only some of the ways in which the search for love is a difficult and often painful experience. Despite the widespread and almost collective character of these experiences, our culture insists they are the result of faulty or insufficiently mature psyches. For many, the Freudian idea that the family designs the pattern of an individual's erotic career has been the main explanation for why and how we fail to find or sustain love. Psychoanalysis and popular psychology have succeeded spectacularly in convincing us that individuals bear responsibility for the misery of their romantic and erotic lives. The purpose of this book is to change our way of thinking about what is wrong in modern relationships. The problem is not dysfunctional childhoods or insufficiently self-aware psyches, but rather the institutional forces shaping how we love. The argument of this book is that the modern romantic experience is shaped by a fundamental transformation in the ecology and architecture of romantic choice. The samples from which men and women choose a partner, the modes of evaluating prospective partners, the very importance of choice and autonomy, and what people imagine to be the spectrum of their choices—all these aspects of choice have transformed the very core of the will: how we want a partner, the sense of worth bestowed by relationships, and the organization of desire. This book does to love what Marx did to commodities: it shows that it is shaped by social relations and institutions and that it circulates
