Tennyson and Victorian Periodicals Kathryn Ledbetter,2016-03-09 This is the first book length study of Tennyson s record of publication in Victorian periodicals Despite Tennyson s supposed hostility to periodicals Ledbetter shows that he made a career long habit of contributing to them and in the process revealed not only his willingness to promote his career but also his status as a highly valued commodity Tennyson published more than sixty poems in serial publications from his debut as a Cambridge prize winning poet with Timbuctoo in the Cambridge Chronicle and Journal to his last public composition as Poet Laureate with The Death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale in The Nineteenth Century In addition poems such as The Charge of the Light Brigade were shaped by his reading of newspapers Ledbetter explores the ironies and tensions created by Tennyson's attitudes toward publishing in Victorian periodicals and the undeniable benefits to his career She situates the poet in an interdependent commodity relationship with periodicals viewing his individual poems as textual modules embedded in a page of meaning inscribed by the periodical's history the poet's relationship with the periodical's readers an image sharing the page whether or not related to the poem and cultural contexts that create new meanings for Tennyson's work Her book enriches not only our understanding of Tennyson's relationship to periodical culture but the textual implications of a poem's relationship with other texts on a periodical page and the meanings available to specific groups of readers targeted by individual periodicals

In Transit Faye Yuan Kleeman, 2014-03-31 This work examines the creation of an East Asian cultural sphere by the Japanese imperial project in the first half of the twentieth century It seeks to re-read the Greater East Asian Co-prosperity Sphere not as a mere political and ideological concept but as the potential site of a vibrant and productive space that accommodated transcultural interaction and transformation By reorienting the focus of post-colonial studies from the macro narrative of political economy military institutions and socio-political dynamics it uncovers a cultural and personal understanding of life within the Japanese imperial enterprise To engage with empire on a personal level one must ask What made ordinary citizens participate in the colonial enterprise What was the lure of empire How did individuals not directly invested in the enterprise become engaged with the idea Explanations offered heretofore emphasize the potency of the institutional or ideological apparatus Faye Kleeman asserts however that desire and pleasure may be better barometers for measuring popular sentiment in the empire what Raymond Williams refers to as the structure of feeling that accompanied modern Japan's expansionism This particular historical moment disseminated common cultural perceptions and values whether voluntarily accepted or forcibly inculcated Mediated by a shared aspiration for modernity a connectedness fostered by new media and a mobility that encouraged travel within the empire an East Asian contact zone was shared by a generation and served as the proto environment that presaged the cultural and media convergences currently taking place in twenty-first century Northeast Asia The negative impact of Japanese imperialism on both nations and societies has been amply demonstrated and cannot be denied but In Transit focuses on the opportunities and unique experiences it afforded a number of extraordinary individuals to provide a fuller picture of Japanese colonial culture By observing the empire from Tokyo to remote Mongolia and colonial Taiwan from the turn of the twentieth century to the postwar era through the diverse perspectives of gender the arts and popular culture it explores an area of colonial experience that straddles the public and the private the national and the personal thereby revealing a new aspect of the colonial condition and its postcolonial implications

Early Modern Dynastic Marriages and Cultural Transfer Joan-Lluís Palos, Magdalena S. Sanchez, 2017-05-15 Toward the end of the fifteenth century the Habsburg family began to rely on dynastic marriage to unite an array of territories eventually creating an empire as had not been seen in Europe since the Romans Other European rulers followed the Habsburgs lead in forging ties through dynastic marriages Because of these marriages many more aristocrats especially women left their homelands to reside elsewhere Until now historians have viewed these unions from a primarily political viewpoint and have paid scant attention to the personal dimensions of these relocations Separated from their family and thrust into a strange new land in which language attire religion food and cultural practices were often different these young aristocrats were forced to conform to new customs or adapt their own customs to a new cultural setting Early Modern Dynastic Marriages and Cultural Transfer examines these marriages as important agents of cultural transfer emphasizing how marriages could lead to the creation of a cosmopolitan culture common to the elites of Europe These essays focus on the personal and domestic dimensions of early modern European court life examining such areas as women's devotional practices fashion patronage and culinary traditions
