Abstract. Staphylococcus aureus strains were isolated from the nasal cavity of patients with nasal polyps and compared with strains isolated from healthy subjects. The strains were characterized by pulsed-field gel electrophoresis (PFGE) and by polymerase chain reaction (PCR) using primers for the hly and hla genes. The results showed that the strains isolated from patients with nasal polyps were more virulent than those isolated from healthy subjects. The results also showed that the strains isolated from patients with nasal polyps were more resistant to antibiotics than those isolated from healthy subjects.
