Art and Religion in Africa Rosalind I. J. Hackett,1996 The artistic and religious traditions of Africa constitute a primary expression of the intellectual and cultural vitality of this vast and fascinating continent Art plays a vital role especially when oral traditions dominate in expressing and communicating ideas about the relationships between the human spiritual and natural worlds However despite the ritual and symbolic significance of many artistic works the interactive and interdependent relationship between art and religion in the African context remains understudied and misunderstood This book draws on the methodologies of several disciplines to provide a greater understanding of the philosophical and religious aspects of artistic works and to challenge Western perceptions of what is important Case studies and examples reflect the geographical material and gendered diversity of Africa s visual and performing arts and highlight the changes imposed by Christianity Islam and the newer religious movements in post colonial Africa

Liminal Images Alex Woodcock,2005 The presence of unusual grotesque and rude carvings on ecclesiastical buildings have been explained in a number of ways from reflecting the warped sense of humour of the masons to a purely ornamental or marginal function However in this study of medieval sculpture from southern England Alex Woodcock suggests that imagery should be seen in the same way as the buildings themselves as liminal spaces mediating between the human mortal world and the sacred and unknown In examining various distorted and foliate heads grotesques mythical creatures beasts and so on Woodcock argues that these are wholly appropriate images for medieval religious life reflecting the ambiguous and the unclassifiable in an unknown realm whilst also having an apotropaic function Placing emphasis on liminality the study focuses in particular on heads severed foliate and otherwise and whole figures humans animals and hybrids including detailed studies of the siren and mermaid
