Language as Bodily Practice in Early China Jane Geaney,2018-03-01 Challenges the idea held by many prominent twentieth century Sinologists that early China experienced a language crisis Jane Geaney argues that early Chinese conceptions of speech and naming cannot be properly understood if viewed through the dominant Western philosophical tradition in which language is framed through dualisms that are based on hierarchies of speech and writing such as reality appearance and one many Instead early Chinese texts repeatedly create pairings of sounds and various visible things This aural visual polarity suggests that texts from early China treat speech as a bodily practice that is not detachable from its use in everyday experience Firmly grounded in ideas about bodies from the early texts themselves Geaney s interpretation offers new insights into three key themes in these texts the notion of speakers intentions yi the physical process of emulating exemplary people and Confucius s proposal to rectify names zhengming The World of Thought in Ancient China

species and in the world at large He argues that the classic Chinese perception of the world did not insist on clear categorical or ontological boundaries between animals humans and other creatures such as ghosts and spirits Instead the animal realm was positioned as part of an organic whole and the mutual relationships among the living species both as natural and cultural creatures were characterized as contingent continuous and interdependent

Authorship and Text-making in Early China Hanmo Zhang,2018-10-08 This book is a timely response to a rather urgent call to seek an updated methodology in rereading and reappraising early Chinese texts in light of newly discovered early writings For a long time the concept of authorship in the formation and transmission of early Chinese texts has been misunderstood The nominal author who should mainly function as a guide to text formation and interpretation is considered retrospectively as the originator and writer of the text This book illustrates that although some notions about the text as the author's property began to appear in some Eastern Han texts a strict correlation between the author and the text results from later conceptions of literary history Before the modern era there existed a conceptual gap between an author and a writer A pre modern Chinese text could have had both an author and a writer or even multiple authors and multiple writers This work is the first study addressing these issues by more systematically emphasizing the connection of the text the author and the religious and sociopolitical settings in which these issues were embedded It is expected to constitute a palpable contribution to Chinese studies and the discipline of philology in general
