

THE HORSE'S SKIN is the largest organ of the body. It is composed of the epidermis, the dermis, and the subcutaneous tissue. The epidermis is the outermost layer of the skin, and the dermis is the layer immediately beneath it. The subcutaneous tissue is the layer of fat that lies beneath the dermis. The skin is covered with hair, and the hair is composed of the hair shaft, the hair root, and the hair bulb. The hair bulb is the part of the hair that is embedded in the skin, and the hair root is the part of the hair that extends above the skin surface. The hair shaft is the part of the hair that is visible above the skin surface.

THE HORSE'S MUSCLES are the organs that contract to produce movement. They are composed of muscle fibers, which are long, cylindrical cells that contain myofibrils. The myofibrils are the contractile units of the muscle, and they are composed of actin and myosin filaments. The actin filaments are thin, and the myosin filaments are thick. The myosin filaments have myosin heads that can attach to the actin filaments and pull them toward the center of the myosin filament, causing the muscle to contract.

THE HORSE'S BONES are the rigid structures that support the body and protect the internal organs. They are composed of bone tissue, which is a hard, mineralized tissue. The bones are divided into long bones, short bones, and irregular bones. Long bones are found in the limbs and are used for support and movement. Short bones are found in the wrist and ankle. Irregular bones are found in the skull and pelvis. The bones are connected to each other by joints, which allow for movement.

THE HORSE'S JOINTS are the points where two or more bones meet. They are composed of articular surfaces, which are the surfaces of the bones that are in contact with each other. The articular surfaces are covered with a layer of articular cartilage, which is a smooth, slippery tissue that reduces friction between the bones. The joints are classified into three types: synovial joints, fibrous joints, and cartilaginous joints. Synovial joints are the most common type of joint and allow for a wide range of movement. Fibrous joints are found between the bones of the skull and the vertebrae. Cartilaginous joints are found between the ribs and the sternum.

THE HORSE'S DIGESTIVE SYSTEM is the system of organs that takes in food, breaks it down into nutrients, and absorbs the nutrients into the bloodstream. It is composed of the mouth, esophagus, stomach, small intestine, large intestine, and rectum. The mouth is where the food enters the digestive system, and the esophagus is the tube that carries the food from the mouth to the stomach. The stomach is a large, muscular organ that stores food and begins the process of digestion. The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is where most of the digestion and absorption of nutrients takes place. The large intestine is a shorter, wider tube that absorbs water and electrolytes from the food. The rectum is the final part of the digestive system and is where the waste is stored before it is eliminated from the body.
