Neuronal Mechanics and Transport Daniel M. Suter,Kyle E. Miller,2016-05-26 Understanding the underlying mechanisms of how axons and dendrites develop is a fundamental problem in neuroscience and a main goal of research on nervous system development and regeneration Previous studies have provided a tremendous amount of information on signaling and cytoskeletal proteins regulating axonal and dendritic growth and guidance However relatively little is known about the relative contribution and role of cytoskeletal dynamics transport of organelles and cytoskeletal components and force generation to axonal elongation Advancing the knowledge of these biomechanical processes is critical to better understand the development of the nervous system the pathological progression of neurodegenerative diseases acute traumatic injury and for designing novel approaches to promote neuronal regeneration following disease stroke or trauma

Mechanical properties and forces shape the development of the nervous system from the cellular up to the organ level Recent advances in quantitative live cell imaging biophysical and nanotechnological methods such as traction force microscopy optical tweezers and atomic force microscopy have enabled researchers to gain better insights into how cytoskeletal dynamics and motor driven transport membrane dynamics adhesion and substrate rigidity influence axonal elongation Given the complexity and mechanical nature of this problem mathematical modeling contributes significantly to our understanding of neuronal mechanics Nonetheless there has been limited direct interaction and discussions between experimentalists and theoreticians in this research area The purpose of this Frontiers Research Topic is to highlight exciting and important work that is currently developing in the fields of neuronal cell biology neuronal mechanics intracellular transport and mathematical modeling in the form of primary research articles reviews perspectives and commentaries

From Coast to Fen: Archaeology in a Dynamic Landscape Claire Christie, Joshua T. Hogue, 2025-07-18 Excavations across East Lincolnshire reveal prehistoric Iron Age Roman and post medieval settlements saltmaking and industrial activity shaped by changing landscapes The area between Anderby Creek and Bicker Fen Lincolnshire to the west of the Lincolnshire Wolds represents a dynamic landscape both in terms of its natural and human aspects This volume presents the results of an extensive programme of archaeological excavation undertaken by Headland Archaeology UK Ltd and Allen Archaeology Ltd from 2018 to 2019 where a total of 15 sites were excavated The excavations uncovered a panoply of remains spanning the prehistoric through to modern periods providing important insights into changing patterns of occupation and the way this diverse landscape was utilised As evidenced through the archaeological works the area saw limited activity during the early prehistoric period in part reflecting the prevailing environmental conditions in which most of the area was inundated Among the earliest recorded finds was an enigmatic middle Bronze Age timber structure as well as a copper alloy axe During the Roman period there is evidence for an expansion in activity across the Scheme with formerly inundated areas becoming accessible Activity within the northern half of the Scheme was focused upon salt production Two of these sites were dated to the late Roman period contrary to the prevailing notion that the salt industry in this region had declined by the mid 2nd century AD Within the southern half of the Scheme were several Roman farmsteads some featuring timber buildings Notable among these was an unusual post built moated structure From these sites a range of artefactual and environmental data was collected providing important insights into the nature of agricultural regimes Evidence of medieval and post medieval activity was also uncovered providing important insights into the development of rural settlement against a backdrop of landscape and environmental changes Evidence of late to post medieval clay extraction and brick manufacture was also identified
