Rajiv R. Thakur, Ashok K. Dutt, Sudhir K. Thakur, George M. Pomeroy, 2020-02-10 This book discusses urban planning and regional development practices in the twentieth century and ways in which they are currently being transformed. It addresses questions such as: What are the factors affecting planning dynamics at local, regional, national, and global scales? With the push to adopt a market paradigm in land development and infrastructure, the relationship between resource management, sustainable development, and the role of governance has been transformed. Centralized planning is giving way to privatization, not only in the traditional regions but also in newly emerging regions of Asia, Africa, and Latin America. Further attempts are being made to bring planning-related decision making closer to the people who are most affected by it. Presenting a collection of studies from scholars around the world and highlighting recent advances in the field, the book is a valuable reference guide for those engaged in urban transformations, whether as graduate students, researchers, practitioners, or policymakers.

Razorfish has profited from and at times even driven the current techno-media wave of change in both technology and media. The authors' ideas are valuable but not ahead of the curve. They discuss what is already well underway rather than predicting coming changes. Abstract recommends their keen assessment of the complex status quo to those who need to understand it better and to those considering change involved in marketing or shaping corporate messages.
