

The Digestive System

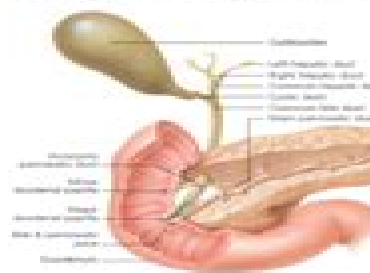

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder, which help in the digestion process.

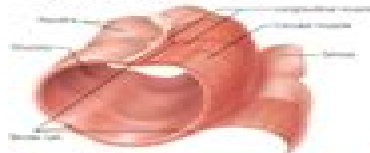

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, digested material enters the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver. The liver is a large organ on the right side of the abdomen. It produces bile, which is stored in the gallbladder. The pancreas, located behind the stomach, produces pancreatic juice, which is also secreted into the duodenum.

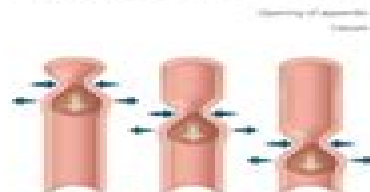

Layers of large intestine

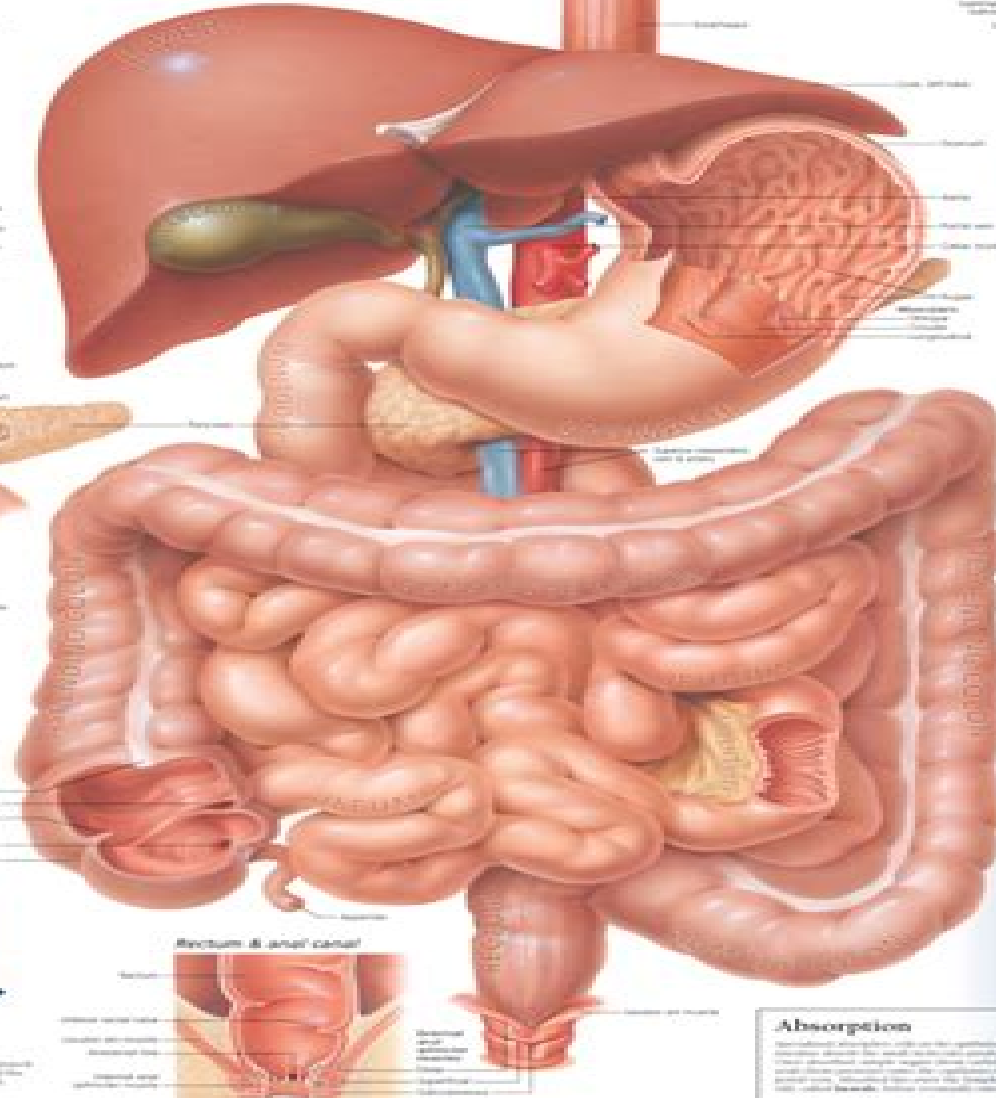

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the caecum, the ascending colon, the transverse colon, the descending colon, and the sigmoid colon. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter, thereby forming feces.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the wave which, when it moves, the material is pushed forward.

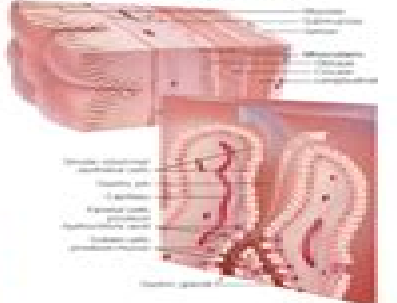

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing, the mechanical action of the food, is called mastication. Saliva, secreted by the salivary glands, moistens the food and helps in the digestion of carbohydrates. It also contains the enzyme amylase, which begins the digestion of starches. Saliva also contains mucus, which helps in the swallowing of food.

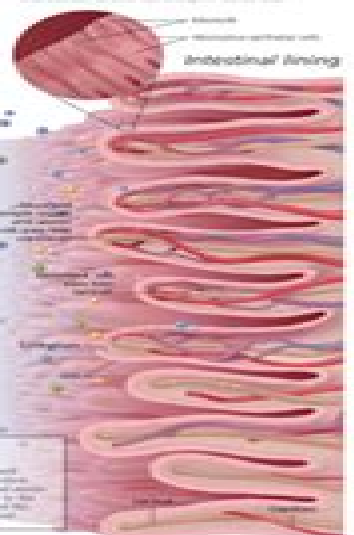

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach wall is composed of several layers, including the mucosa, submucosa, muscle, and serosa. The stomach also contains gastric juice, which is secreted by the gastric glands.

Small intestine

The small intestine consists of three parts: the duodenum, the jejunum, and the ileum. It is responsible for the digestion of food and the absorption of nutrients. The small intestine is highly coiled and has a large surface area for absorption.

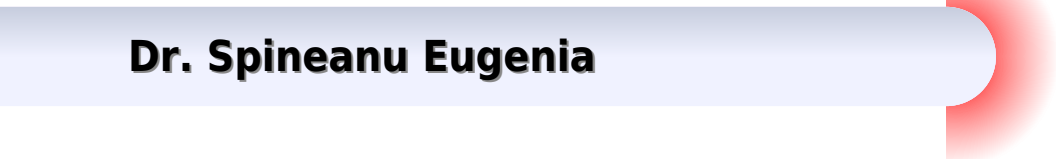

Intestinal lining

Absorption

The small intestine is responsible for the absorption of nutrients from the food. The villi on the inner lining of the small intestine increase the surface area for absorption. The nutrients are absorbed into the bloodstream and then transported to the rest of the body.
