

Understanding Allergies

What Is An Allergy?

An allergy is an abnormal reaction of the body to a substance that is usually harmless. The reaction is caused by the immune system, which is designed to protect the body from harmful substances.

When the immune system reacts to a substance that is not harmful, it causes an allergic reaction. This reaction can range from mild to severe.

There are many different types of allergies, and they can affect anyone at any age.

Some common allergies include pollen, dust, mold, and certain foods.

Severe allergic reactions can be life-threatening and require immediate medical attention.

Managing allergies involves avoiding the allergen and taking medication to control the symptoms.

It is important to consult with a healthcare professional if you suspect you have an allergy.
