Migration and Democracy Abel Escribà-Folch, Joseph Wright, Covadonga Meseguer, 2022-01-11 How remittances money sent by workers back to their home countries support democratic expansion In the growing body of work on democracy little attention has been paid to its links with migration Migration and Democracy focuses on the effects of worker remittances money sent by migrants back to their home countries and how these resources shape political action in the Global South Remittances are not only the largest source of foreign income in most autocratic countries but also in contrast to foreign aid or international investment flow directly to citizens As a result they provide resources that make political opposition possible and they decrease government dependency undermining the patronage strategies underpinning authoritarianism The authors discuss how international migration produces a decentralized flow of income that generally circumvents governments to reach citizens who act as democratizing agents Documenting why dictatorships fall and how this process has changed in the last three decades the authors show that remittances increase the likelihood of protest and reduce electoral support for authoritarian incumbents Combining global macroanalysis with microdata and case studies of Senegal and Cambodia Migration and Democracy demonstrates how remittances and the movement of people from authoritarian nations to higher income countries foster democracy and its expansion

Multi-party Elections in Africa Michael Cowen, Liisa Laakso, 2002 Most of the studies in this book are about national elections in Anglophone Africa There are also less well known examples from Sudan Ethiopia and Guinea Bissau The collection also features studies of the local elections in Namibia and of a significant by election in Malawi The multiparty period has been put wherever possible within the historical context of earlier elections in Africa Questions addressed include how did incumbent governing regimes learn to live with multiparty politics Why have some elections been so closely fought and others have suffered from apathy Why has there been relatively open political expression and activity when the elections have increased the political and economic manipulation by incumbent governments Why have the elections of the 1990s been so marked by local and ethnic variations To what extent did this wave of democracy result from pressure from donor countries North America Palgrave
