

QUESTION 9 (10 marks)

- a) You are the qualified electrical engineer at a large open-cut mine. As part of a major upgrade, the project team is installing a new digital radio system that incorporates advanced functionality well beyond two-way communications. This includes the capability to interface with equipment for remote control and alarming purposes; positioning of personnel and equipment via embedded GPS; and trunking of data for voice, equipment positioning, surveying systems and the Mine SCADA system. The project team has already made a lot of progress in integrating the new equipment into your existing monitoring and control networks. Outline the process you would follow to manage the introduction of this equipment to site. (3 marks)
- b) In undertaking the introduction process, list what legislation, Australian Standards and MSHA Mine Safety Guidelines you would consider applicable to the equipment? (2 marks)
- c) In initiating the site introduction process, it is revealed the equipment has not been designed or manufactured with reference to relevant codes and standards. Enquiries to another site that has recently installed a similar system revealed a host of ongoing issues. The local supplier has little ability to make changes to the system to achieve compliance, as it is 'off the shelf' technology from a global supplier. The General Manager is becoming frustrated at the potential delays given the opportunity this system provides to improve the efficiency of her operation. How will you manage these non-compliances so that this part of the project is still delivered on time and the ongoing safe operation of the site is not compromised? (3 marks)
- d) List the documentation you would expect the supplier to provide with the equipment. (2 marks)
