THE END

These particular circumstances inspired Wright's decision to establish a center of "cultural and artistic development" for the community. The center would be a place where the children could learn to read, write, and draw, and where they could also learn to play musical instruments. Wright's vision was to create a place where the children could learn to be "cultured" and "civilized".

There is a certain, often, heated protest against the use of the word "cultural studies" in the title of the book. The protest is based on the fact that the word "cultural studies" has been used in a variety of contexts and for a variety of purposes. The book is not a study of "cultural studies" as a discipline, but a study of the ways in which the word "cultural studies" has been used in a variety of contexts and for a variety of purposes.
