How are the rates calculated?

Adiponectin levels are low in obese subjects, non-obese subjects with insulin resistance, and in type 2 diabetes. Adiponectin levels increase in response to weight loss, and in response to treatment with thiazolidinediones. Higher levels of adiponectin are associated with lower levels of insulin resistance, and with lower levels of triglyceride levels. Adiponectin levels are also associated with lower levels of C-reactive protein, and with lower levels of fibrinogen. Adiponectin levels are also associated with lower levels of blood pressure, and with lower levels of cardiovascular risk factors. Adiponectin levels are also associated with lower levels of mortality in type 2 diabetes, and with lower levels of mortality in cardiovascular disease.
