Graphs:

can provide an overview of the function. The graph shows the input-output pairs of the function.

Tables:

show the input-output pairs of the function. They are useful for identifying the function's behavior at specific input values.

Equations:

A function equation defines the relationship between the input and output. For example, $f(x) = 2x + 1$ defines a function where the output is twice the input plus one.

Graphing:

Graphing a function visually represents the relationship between the input and output. It allows us to see the function's behavior over a range of input values.
