

CLOSED WATER SYSTEMS

Water supply systems may, because of code requirements or such conditions as high line pressure, among others, have installed devices such as pressure-reducing valves, check valves, and back flow preventers. Devices such as these cause the water system to be a closed system.

RECIRCULATION LOOPS

Combo heating systems and hot water supply recirculation loop systems require adequate check valves in the loop piping to prevent passive circulation through the water heater when the system pump is not operating.

Passive flow, also known as thermo-siphoning, can be generated when the loop system water is cooler than the temperature of the water in the heater. This can happen during long standby periods, during the off heating season or when the air handler is in air conditioning mode. Passive flow can cause unwanted firing of the heater resulting in overheating which can relieve the T&P valve.

THERMAL EXPANSION

As water is heated, it expands (thermal expansion). In a closed system, the volume of water will increase. As the volume of water increases, there will be a corresponding increase in water pressure due to thermal expansion. Thermal expansion can cause premature tank failure (leakage). This type of failure is not covered under the limited warranty. Thermal expansion can also cause intermittent temperature-pressure relief valve operation; water discharged from the valve due to excessive pressure build up. The temperature-pressure relief valve is not intended for the constant relief of thermal expansion. This condition is not covered under the limited warranty.

A properly-sized thermal expansion tank should be installed on all closed systems to control the harmful effects of thermal expansion. Contact a plumbing service agency or your retail supplier regarding the installation of a thermal expansion tank.

Note: To protect against untimely corrosion of hot and cold water fittings, it is recommended that dielectric unions or couplings be installed on this water heater when connected to copper pipe.

Note: If using copper tubing, solder tubing to an adapter before attaching the adapter to the water heater connections. Do not solder the water lines directly to the water heater connections - it will harm the dip tube and heat traps and damage the tank.

CAUTION

Property Damage Hazard

- Avoid water heater damage.
- Install thermal expansion tank if necessary.
- Do not apply heat to cold water inlet.
- Contact qualified installer or service agency.
