ALIZE is a prototype of a system for managing the energy consumption of a building. It is designed to be used by a building manager to monitor and control the energy usage of different parts of the building. The system is based on a central database that stores information about the energy consumption of different parts of the building. The building manager can use the system to view the energy consumption of different parts of the building and to make adjustments to the energy usage of different parts of the building. The system is designed to be used by a building manager to monitor and control the energy usage of different parts of the building.
