'What is the "Bildungsroman" genre and how well does Great Expectations fit into it?

Are there any other genres that come to mind when reading the novel?

Bildungsroman is a sort of coming-of-age novel that depicts a character's life from childhood to adulthood. 'Great Expectations' fit into this genre well because it depicts Philip's (Pip's) life from his childhood to his adulthood. Other genres it also fit into is romance due to Pip's relationship with Estella but also social criticism with emphasis on the class differences between the poor and the rich, in this case, between Pip and Estella.

Pip: Philip Pirrip is his full name. He is the protagonist who lives with his sister and her husband, Joe Gargery. His parents died when he was very young. The story shows Pip's humble beginnings from orphan to a gentleman with wealth and social status. It all starts when he encounters the convicted Abel Magwitch in the graveyard near his home where his parents lie. With the help of a benefactor, he lives everything behind and goes to London. There, he wants to become a gentleman and distance himself from his origins. He wants all of this so that he can impress Estella but grows too proud for his own good in his ambitions. And so he starts to avoid Joe and Biddy because they are of a lower class than himself. By the end of the novel, he'll learn to not judge people by their social classes.

Biddy: Biddy is a girl Pip meets at the village's school. She moves into Pip's house to help out Mrs Joe after her attack and later on becomes a teacher. She is humble, kind and very intelligent. She calls out on Pip's snobbery and delusions way before he even notices themselves; she sees through everyone's pretensions.

Estella Havisham: The adopted daughter of Miss Havisham. She is beautiful, proud and cold; raised by Miss Havisham to break men's heart. Her beauty and elegance attract many men (suitors) but she cannot fall in love due to how cold she has been brought up by Miss Havisham.

Miss Havisham: Miss Havisham is the one who has adopted Estella. She is the daughter of a brewer and she is wealthy. Compeyson leaves her on the day of their wedding. She keeps her wedding things, cakes, dress, etc. intact for many years and cannot move on from her pain. She raises Estella to be heartless and break men's heart on purpose to exact revenge on males. Miss Havisham is heartless, bitter and manipulative. She cannot recognise anyone pain but her own but do regret it when she realizes that Pip is deeply in love with Estella. This is a turning point in her character development as she recognises her own faults and wants to
