Term Paper Guidelines

Format

- 10-15 typed pages (2000-3000 words), double-spaced, 10-12-point font
- Pages should be numbered and stapled
- The essay must have a cover page with your name and student number along with the title of the essay.
- It should not be in a duo tang or other type of binder.

Structure

- The essay must have a title. The title should encapsulate your main argument.
- The essay should have an introductory paragraph/section that outlines your major argument or thesis, as well as supporting hypotheses and evidence for the topic you have chosen. It is often helpful to think in terms of a question the paper attempts to answer.
- The body of the text should build on the hypothesis by providing examples to support your argument, i.e. it must be both descriptive and analytical. Failure to be analytical (i.e. entirely descriptive) or failure to back up any assertions made, either by evidence or argument, will result in a lower grade.
- The conclusion should summarize the results of your analysis (not what you did). You may also discuss any new understandings or insights that you have arrived at from doing the essay. The concluding section is not a place to introduce new data.
- The essay must have a list of references used.

References

- Note: "References " refers to books and articles actually referred to in the essay. A "Bibliography ", on the other hand, is simply a list of books or articles that may or may not have been used. It is the former that is required.
- A minimum of 3, and a maximum of 10, scholarly References must be used.
- You must use the American Anthropological Association's reference format for this paper. http://www.aaanet.org/pubs/style_guide.htm
- Any of the books or articles used in the class may be used
- You may also incorporate your own original research from interviews or participant observation etc. If you chose to do this please see me.

Evaluation

The paper will be evaluated according to the following criteria:

- Clarity of structure and organization. Is the essay clear, concise and to the point? Is the information presented in a logical, orderly fashion that can be readily understood?
- Innovativeness and analytic interpretation. Does the essay provide new insight into the chosen subject matter via carefully thought out consideration or does it come off as a simple "re-hash" of source materials?
- Style. Does the report flow? Is the author familiar and comfortable with her/his subject? Is it grammatically correct? Does the student give the impression that she/he knows what she/he is talking about?
