

Detailed Notes for AP Bio Unit 2

- Unit 2 covers the structure and function of cells, including their membranes, organelles, cytoskeleton, and cell cycle.
- Cell membranes are composed of a phospholipid bilayer with embedded proteins and other molecules. They regulate the passage of substances into and out of the cell and maintain homeostasis.
- Some membrane proteins act as transporters, channels, receptors, enzymes, or anchors. They can be classified as integral (embedded in the membrane) or peripheral (attached to the surface).
- Membrane fluidity depends on factors such as temperature, cholesterol content, and saturation of fatty acids. Membranes are more fluid at higher temperatures, lower cholesterol levels, and higher unsaturation of fatty acids.
- Membrane permeability depends on factors such as size, polarity, charge, and concentration gradient of molecules. Small, nonpolar molecules can diffuse across membranes easily; large, polar molecules need transport proteins; ions need channels or pumps.
- Passive transport is the movement of molecules across membranes without energy input. It includes simple diffusion (down a concentration gradient), facilitated diffusion (through transport proteins), and osmosis (diffusion of water).
- Active transport is the movement of molecules across membranes with energy input. It includes primary active transport (using ATP to pump molecules against a concentration gradient) and secondary active transport (using an electrochemical gradient to drive the transport of another molecule).
- Endocytosis is the process of taking in materials into the cell by forming vesicles from the plasma membrane. It includes phagocytosis (cell eating), pinocytosis (cell drinking), and receptor-mediated endocytosis (specific uptake of ligands).
- Exocytosis is the process of releasing materials from the cell by fusing vesicles with the plasma membrane. It is used for secretion of hormones, neurotransmitters, enzymes, etc.
- Organelles are specialized structures within cells that perform specific functions. They include:
 - Nucleus: contains DNA and RNA; site of transcription
 - Ribosomes: synthesize proteins; site of translation
 - Endoplasmic reticulum: network of membranes that modify and transport proteins; rough ER has ribosomes; smooth ER lacks ribosomes
 - Golgi apparatus: stack of flattened membranes that sort and package proteins for export
 - Lysosomes: contain digestive enzymes that break down macromolecules and recycle cellular components
 - Vacuoles: store water, ions, nutrients, waste products; plant cells have a large central vacuole
