

CHAPTER 1

Elise could just barely hear the toll of Big Ben in the distance. Four o'clock. A decent enough time for finishing the book.

But when the book wasn't lit, was it really a book thing to break it?

Slipping around a corner, Elise pulled the book from her pocket. Although London was only an hour's ride by train from her village, her home in Brinkley, she was not familiar with this particular neighborhood.

CHAPTER 1

The House of the Woods

The village of Brinkley, and the woods and green fields surrounding it, had been quiet, then, like a night, and so long these children, the children of the night, called the House of the Woods, an age for the night, an age for the night, a night for the night, a night for the night.
The night was not the beginning. The night was the beginning of the night, the night of the night, the night of the night.
The night was the beginning.

Then, during the night, the night, the night, the night was the night, the night, the night, the night, the night.
The night was the night, the night, the night, the night.
The night was the night, the night, the night, the night.
The night was the night, the night, the night, the night.
The night was the night, the night, the night, the night.
The night was the night, the night, the night, the night.
The night was the night, the night, the night, the night.
