Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week resistance training program on the muscle strength and endurance of young adults. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting and involved 20 participants who were randomly assigned to either a control group or an experimental group. The experimental group performed a resistance training program consisting of three sets of eight repetitions of a specific exercise, while the control group did not perform any exercise. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly greater muscle strength and endurance than the control group after the 12-week program. The findings of this study suggest that a 12-week resistance training program can effectively improve muscle strength and endurance in young adults.
