Negotiating Borderlines in Four Contemporary Migrant Writers from the Middle East Petya Tsoneva Ivanova,2018-10-23 The book considers the persistent tendency to represent the Middle East as a region enclosed in less permeable boundaries This perspective of enclosure haunts Middle Eastern Studies and is part of ongoing cultural debates on cross border circulation currently challenged by spectacular outbursts of violence along resurfacing lines of division This critical study analyses selected works of four contemporary Anglophone migrant writers from the Middle East namely Rabi Alameddine Diana Abu Jaber Laila Halaby and Elif Shafak to demonstrate that in spite of the forceful lines that remain after religious ethnic and political disputes this region does not exist as a rigidly delimited place in the writing of migrants who reclaim it back from beyond its boundaries Rather than being a permanent location it is constructed as a place that flows into other places and is constantly reshaped by a variety of personal stories migrant trajectories departures and returns Unruly Labor Andrea Wright,2024-10-22 In the mid twentieth century the Arabian Peninsula emerged as a key site of oil production International companies recruited workers from across the Middle East and Asia to staff their expanding oil projects Unruly Labor considers the working conditions hiring practices and most important worker actions and strikes at these oil projects It illuminates the multiple ways workers built transnational solidarities to agitate for better working conditions and how worker actions informed shifting understandings of rights citizenship and national security Andrea Wright highlights the increasing associations between oil governance and racialized management practices to map how labor was increasingly depoliticized From the 1940s to 1971 a period that includes the end of formal British imperialism in the Arabian Sea and the development of new state governments citizenship became both an avenue for workers to advocate for their rights and simultaneously a way to limit other solidarities Examining the interests of workers government officials and oil company managers alike Wright offers a new history of Middle Eastern oil and twentieth century capitalism a history that illuminates how labor management and national security concerns have shaped state governance and economic policy priorities The Palgrave Handbook of Global Approaches to Peace Aigul Kulnazarova,Vesselin Popovski,2018-12-19 With existing literature focusing largely on Western perspectives of peace and their applications a global understanding of peace is much needed Spurred by more recent debates and discourses that criticize the dominant realist and liberal approaches for crises in contemporary state and peace building the contributors to this handbook emphasize not only the need to solve this eternal conundrum of humanity but also demand with the rise of increasingly more violent conflicts in international relations the development of a global interpretive framework for peace and security To this end the present handbook examines conceptual institutional and normative interpretive approaches for making building and promoting peace in the context of
