Autism Spectrum Disorders: From Genotypes to Phenotypes Valsamma Eapen,Andrew J. Whitehouse,Charles Claudianos,Rudi Crnec,2015-12-10 This Research Topic covers the pathogenetic processes in Autism Spectrum Disorder ASD that underpin the translation of genetic vulnerability to clinically significant symptoms Available research data in ASD suggests that it is a neural connectivity disorder and that the social communication and related neurobehavioural symptoms result from reduced synchronization between key social brain regions These interconnected neural systems can be understood through the relationship between functionally relevant anatomic areas and neurochemical pathways the programming of which are genetically modulated during neurodevelopment and mediated through a range of epigenetic and environmental modulators Elucidating the underlying molecular mechanisms can provide an invaluable window for understanding the neural wiring that regulates higher brain functions and consequent clinical phenotypes In keeping with the multi modal and diverse origins of ASD this Research Topic explores the genetic underpinnings and environmental modulation in the aetiology neural substrates biomarkers and endophenotypes that underlie clinical characteristics as well as neurochemical pathways and pathophysiological mechanisms that pave the way for therapeutic interventions Furthermore since genetically mediated deficits and consequent functional impairments involve activity dependent synapse development that depends on postnatal learning and experience the trajectory towards the final clinical expression could be modulated by early interventions that exploit the neuronal maturation and brain plasticity However identifying these diverse pathogenetic processes and tailoring interventions would require subtyping ASD into homogeneous subgroups In this regard this topic covers the current state of evidence in the literature through topic reviews as well as ongoing original work that provides tangible hypotheses and directions for future research The Changing Nature of Religious Rights under International Law Malcolm Evans,Peter Petkoff,Julian Rivers,2015-03-19 The Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief as proclaimed by the United Nations General Assembly in 1981 is the only universal human rights instrument specifically focusing on religious intolerance and discrimination However recent years have seen increasing controversy surrounding this right in both political and legal contexts The European Court of Human Rights has experienced a vast expansion in the number of cases it has had brought before it concerning religious freedom and politically the boundaries of the right have been much disputed This book provides a systematic analysis of the different approaches to religious rights which exist in public international law The book explores how particular institutional perspectives emerge in the context of these differing approaches It examines and challenges these institutional perspectives It identifies new directions for approaching religious rights through international law by examining existing legal tools and assesses their achievements and shortcomings It studies religious organisations support for international human rights protection as well as religious critique of international human rights and the development of an alternative religious Bills of Rights It investigates whether expressions of members belonging to religious minorities can be considered under the minority right to culture rather than the right to religion and discusses the benefits and shortcomings of such a route It analyses the reach and limits of the provisions in the 1981 Declaration identifies ways in which the right is being eroded as a concept and suggests new ways in which the right can be reinforced and protected
