political economic and cultural context of the communities in which they are practised Many of the countries that have gone on to develop restorative justice as part of their formal justice system have developed their policy on the model of their indigenous communities for example in Canada and in New Zealand However with the globalisation of restorative practices within the past decade many countries have sought to colonise restorative justice by developing a standardised best practice approach Instead of a practice that is developed and formed by its community colonised restorative justice dictates that one size fits all Examined through the lens of the development and implementation of restorative justice policies in Jamaica this book argues that this Westernised approach diminishes the effectiveness of restorative justice in its capacity to address the victim s needs to hold the offender accountable in a way that reintegrates them into society and to empower the community by involving them in the provision of justice to victims Restorative justice then must be decolonised and local indigenous practices acknowledged if it is to achieve its aims This book will be of interest to a range of scholars with interests in decolonisation as well as alternative dispute resolution especially those in sociolegal studies criminology human rights social policy political science and Caribbean studies

Cummings,2016-07-12 Empathy has provoked equal measures of excitement and controversy in recent years For some empathy is crucial to understanding others helping us bridge social and cultural differences For others empathy is nothing but a misguided assumption of access to the minds of others In this book Cummings argues that empathy comes in many forms some helpful to understanding others and some detrimental Tracing empathy s genealogy through aesthetic theory philosophy psychology and performance theory Cummings illustrates how theatre artists and scholars have often overlooked the dynamic potential of empathy by focusing on its more monologic forms in which spectators either project their point of view onto characters or passively identify with them This book therefore explores how empathy is most effective when it functions as a dialogue along with how theatre and performance can utilise the live emergent exchange between bodies in space to encourage more dynamic dialogic encounters between performers and audience Chemical Process Equipment - Selection and Design (Revised 2nd Edition)

Technology and Society, second edition Deborah G. Johnson,Jameson M. Wetmore,2021-08-24 Writings by thinkers ranging from Rokeya Sakhawat Hossain to Bruno Latour that focus on the interconnections of technology society and values Technological change does not happen in a vacuum decisions about which technologies to develop fund market and use engage ideas about values as well as calculations of costs and benefits In order to influence the development of technology for the better we must first understand how technology and society are inextricably bound together These writings by thinkers ranging from Bruno Latour to Francis Fukuyama help us do just that examining how people shape technology and how technology shapes people This second edition updates the original significantly offering twenty one new essays along with fifteen from the first edition The book first presents visions of the future that range from technological utopias to cautionary tales and then introduces several major STS theories. It examines human and social values and how they are embedded in technological choices and explores the interesting and subtle complexities of the technology-society relationship. Remedying a gap in earlier theorizing in the field, many of the texts illustrate how race and gender are intertwined with technology. Finally, the book offers a set of readings that focus on the sociotechnical challenges we face today, treating topics that include cybersecurity, geoengineering, and the myth of neutral technology.
