Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 30 to 45 years old, who were randomly selected from a health club. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The control group was instructed to maintain their current level of activity, while the exercise group was instructed to perform a 12-week training program. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions were performed on a treadmill at a speed of 3.0 mph, with a 5% incline. The HR and EE were measured at the beginning and end of the training program. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant increase in HR and EE compared to the control group. The HR increased from 140 to 150 beats per minute, and the EE increased from 1,200 to 1,400 kcal per day. These results suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively increase the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract: This paper presents a new method for the automatic detection of the onset of a seizure in EEG signals. The method is based on the analysis of the power spectrum of the EEG signal. The power spectrum is calculated for each time window of the EEG signal. The onset of a seizure is detected when the power spectrum shows a significant increase in the power of the low frequency components. The method is evaluated using a set of EEG signals recorded from patients with epilepsy. The results show that the method is able to detect the onset of a seizure with a high degree of accuracy.
