Abstract

Abstract: This is a preliminary study of the effects of a 10-week training program on the performance of a group of 10 young athletes. The program was designed to improve the athletes' performance in a 100-m sprint. The results of the study show that the athletes' performance improved significantly after the training program. The mean time for the 100-m sprint decreased from 15.5 seconds to 14.2 seconds. The standard deviation of the times decreased from 0.8 seconds to 0.5 seconds. The results of the study suggest that the training program was effective in improving the athletes' performance in a 100-m sprint.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program on the physical and psychological health of older adults with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD). The study was a randomized controlled trial. The intervention group participated in a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program. The control group did not participate in the exercise program. The primary outcome was the change in the 6-minute walk test (6MWT) score. The secondary outcomes were the change in the St. George's Respiratory Questionnaire (SGRQ) score, the change in the Short Form-36 (SF-36) score, and the change in the Borg Scale of Perceived Exertion (Borg Scale) score. The 6MWT score increased significantly in the intervention group compared with the control group. The SGRQ score decreased significantly in the intervention group compared with the control group. The SF-36 score increased significantly in the intervention group compared with the control group. The Borg Scale score decreased significantly in the intervention group compared with the control group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program can improve the physical and psychological health of older adults with COPD.
