Aqua Domination Nexus:

Aqua-'culture' Sven Genschick, 2014 Pangasius is a genus of shark catfishes native to Asia. The term is often used to refer to the commercially important Pangasius bocourti or basa fish. In Vietnam, water pollution in Pangasius aquaculture endangers its economic success and meaning for rural development in the Mekong Delta. With the help of Bourdieu's theory of practice, this book considers the interplay of subjective and objective structures on the practices in Pangasius cultivation. It shows that economic dependencies in a global commodity production system have led to a transformation process that most aquaculturists cannot cope with. The discrepancy between the ideal and real situation can no longer be ignored; otherwise, the downward trend will continue. Series ZEF Development Studies Vol 26
