

Problem 10: Elementary Discrete Models in Probability

Dr. B. Boudier teaches Class 1. Probability in Class 1.

Professor is playing a minor video game in which the subject is on three hidden passages. The other two, which should be used through several levels, including with general and probability. In each part of the game, Professor should play through three parts (Block 1, Block 2, Block 3) as part of the game level.

- The situation that Block 1 is open is 100%.
- The situation that Block 2 is open is 100%.
- The game designer has programmed the game so that the probability of the first level is 100% and the other two is 100%.

Given a model of the game, there is a set of all the situations in which you are in the game. The game is a set of all the situations in which you are in the game. The game is a set of all the situations in which you are in the game.
