Abstract: Background: The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of self-reported depression in a sample of 1000 young adults in the United States. Methods: Data were obtained from the National Longitudinal Study of Adolescent Health, a nationally representative sample of adolescents in grades 7-12. Results: The prevalence of self-reported depression was 10.1% (95% CI = 9.1-11.1%). Conclusions: The prevalence of self-reported depression in this sample of young adults is consistent with previous research. The study highlights the need for further research on the prevalence of self-reported depression in young adults.
