Argumentative Essay

Another animal lay dead on the table. Another victim of "research". Animal testing has proven an amazing way to learn how to cure various diseases, however it has come at a cost. Animal blood has been spilled so that we can survive. And even though it is useful, it is painful and harsh. Even though animal testing is a last resort and can help cure diseases, animal testing should not continue since the animals can die and don't get a choice.

Using animals for testing is amazing for us, but not so amazing for the animals on account of the fact that the animals can, and do, die. Knowing the fact that animals can help cure diseases prompts the fact that animals are often infected with said diseases so we can cure them, which, in turn, makes the animal go through the pain of the diseases and symptoms, which may kill them. According to paragraph 15 of "We Need to Stop Animal Testing", the author states, "Although humans often benefit from animal successful animal research, the pain, the suffering, and the deaths of animals are not worth the possible human benefits." This evidence shows how harsh the testing environments are and that the animals are not treated well. They are in pain, suffering through those procedures just so we can get more scientific research and more medicine to let us live. Animals are put through enough already, and dying to a test should not be one of them.

When testing starts, animals don't get to choose whether or not they are picked first to test on, or whether they're tested on at all. Scientist raise these animals in captivity for most of their lives and they don't get to see the wild. According to paragraph 17 of "We Need to Stop Animal Testing", the author states, "Yet animals rights are violated when they are used in research because construct student engagement has recently gained special interest in an attempt to deal with the serious problem of school failure. School engagement builds on the anatomy of the students' involvement in school and describes their feelings, behaviors, and thoughts about their school experiences. So engagement is an important component of students' school experience with a close relationship to achievement and school failure. Children who self-set academic goals, attend school regularly, and on time behave well in class, complete their homework, and study at home are likely to interact adequately with the school's social and physical environments and perform well in school. In contrast, children who miss school are more likely to display disruptive behaviors in class, miss homework frequently, exhibit violent behaviors on the playground, fail subjects, be retained, and if the behaviors persist, quit school. Moreover, engagement should also be considered as an important school outcome eliciting more or less supportive reactions from educators. For example, children who display school-engaged behaviors are likely to receive motivational and instructional support from their teachers. The opposite may also be true. But what makes students engage more or less? The relevant literature indicates that personal variables (e.g., sensory motor neurodevelopmental, cognitive, motivational, emotional, behavior problems, learning difficulties, addictions, social and/or cultural variables) (e.g., negative family conditions, child abuse, cultural deprivation, ethnic conditions, immigration) or school variables (e.g., coexistence at school, bullying, cyberbullying) may concurrently hinder engagement, preventing the student from acquiring the learnings in the same conditions as the rest of the classmates.

Animal Research and Ethical Conflict Mary T. Phillips, Jeri A. Sechzer, 2012-12-06 This volume grew out of a project to conduct a survey of the scientific literature of the United States for items addressing the ethical and humane issues of animal experimentation The original purpose of the survey was to provide background information for the development of a set of guide lines for the use of animals in research then in preparation by The New York Academy of Sciences Ad Hoc Committee on Animal Research We soon realized however that the survey constituted a valuable resource in its own right In this book we present the results of the literature survey along with relevant information about its legislative and historical context We hope that this material will be helpful to biomedical researchers grappling with animal welfare problems as well as to social scientists interested in tracing the evolution of the 20th century phase of the animal research controversy The time span covered by the survey was selected to match the 20 year period between the passage of the first federal Animal Welfare Act in 1966 and the most recent legislation regulating animal research which took effect during 1986 Our analysis examines this transitional period through the pages of the scientific literature During these 2 decades animal research in the United States was transformed Activist animal protection organizations catapulted troublesome ethical questions to national prominence throwing the scientific community into turmoil The Student's Guide to Exam Success Eileen
