

Native America post

Life style and reservation policy:

- The belief was that lands west of the Mississippi would permanently remain "Indian country".
- (Soon proven false)
- Wagon trails moved westward
- As a result, federal governments began assigning the tribes definite boundaries.

Indian Wars:

- The settlement of farmers, miners, and homesteaders on American Indian land led to violence.
- Following wars, treaties were established in order to attempt to solve the plain Indians on smaller reservations with the federal government promising government and support.

Assimilation:

- Best-selling books describing the injustice done to the American Indians
- Created sympathy for American Indians (eastern U.S)
- Generated support for aiding American Indian culture through assimilation (teaching white culture in order to separate them from their original culture).

Dawes Act:

- Act designed to break up tribal organizations, which man, feel that kept American Indians from becoming civilized and law-abiding citizens.
- Divided lands up to 160 acres depending on family size.
- U.S. citizens snip was created for those who stayed on the land for 25 years and maintained habits of civilized life.
- In 1924, recognition of forced assimilation failed, the federal government granted United States citizens to all American Indians
- Adopted the Indian reorganization act and promoted the rehabilitation of tribal organizations.

Wounded Knee:

- The slaughter of about 130 – 300 Indians by United States Army troops in the area of wounded knee creek.
- Caused when trying to perform rituals

Decimation of American Bison:

- The Bison population was greatly decreasing due to western expansion wanting to build new railroad transportation systems.
- The land was also decreasing due to westward expansion
- Forest reserve act and forest management were created for the preservation of public land and natural treasures.
- Acts withdrew federal timberlands from development and regulates their use.

Doc 1 questions:

Question #1: the gold rush impacted the Native Americans on the Pacific Ocean because it took the land that was supposed to be reserved for them. This creates a sense of helplessness; they were subjected to discrimination which led to murders committed due to the government not passing treaties for their protection.
