The Silicone Breast Implant Story Marsha L. Vanderford, David H. Smith, 2013-11-05 This volume examines one health issue breast implants across a series of contexts often thought to be separate media coverage doctor patient interaction doctor doctor professional communication support group dialogues public relations campaigns and more In so doing it provides a narrative of how communication shapes the individual perceptions of health government and social policy concerning health care At the core of the silicone breast implant controversy is the need for people to act amid uncertainty about the health risks involved This need to weigh action in the midst of uncertain risk characterizes a large number of health issues The attempts of patients physicians drug manufacturers and others to seek and provide both information and influence makes communication central to these issues Consequently the questions explored in this volume will interest a diverse group of readers This audience includes plastic surgeons in particular physicians in general and anyone involved with women's health issues As the medical profession struggles with its identity amid changes in public attitudes government regulations and medical practices this volume's findings concerning media portrayals of doctors and medical devices become even more important Finally this study reveals how interrelated public information and private decisions are and how closely media and interpersonal relationships fit Tracing one medical issue across interpersonal organizational public relations and mediated forums has clearly demonstrated the multiple ways those communication channels overlap and inform one another

Cancer Victor R Preedy, 2014-03-01 Cancer Oxidative Stress and Dietary Antioxidants bridges the trans disciplinary divide and covers in a single volume the science of oxidative stress in cancer and then the potentially therapeutic usage of natural antioxidants in the diet or food matrix The processes within the science of oxidative stress are described in concert with other processes such as apoptosis cell signaling and receptor mediated responses This approach recognizes that diseases are often multifactorial and that oxidative stress is a single component of this Oncologists cancer researchers and nutritionists are separated by divergent skills and professional disciplines that need to be bridged in order to advance preventative as well as treatment strategies While oncologists and cancer researchers may study the underlying pathogenesis of cancer they are less likely to be conversant in the science of nutrition and dietetics On the other hand nutritionists and dietitians are less conversant with the detailed clinical background and science of oncology This book addresses this gap and brings each of these disciplines to bear on the processes inherent in the oxidative stress of cancer Nutritionists can apply information related to mitochondrial oxidative stress in one disease to diet related strategies in another unrelated disease Dietitians can prescribe new foods or diets containing anti oxidants for conditions resistant to conventional pharmacological treatments Dietitians after learning about the basic biology of oxidative stress will be able to suggest new treatments to their multidisciplinary teams Nutritionists and dietitians will gain an understanding of cell signaling and be able to suggest new preventative or therapeutic strategies with anti oxidant rich foods
