A Study in Scarlet Illustrated Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, 2021-04-27

In 1881 Doctor John Watson has returned to London after serving in the Second Anglo Afghan War He visits the Criterion Restaurant and runs into an old friend named Stamford who had been a dresser under him at St Bartholomew's Hospital Watson tells Stamford he is looking for a place to live before his nine month half pay pension runs out Stamford mentions that an acquaintance of his Sherlock Holmes is looking for someone to split the rent at a flat at 221B Baker Street but he cautions Watson about Holmes's eccentricities Stamford takes Watson back to St Bartholomew's where in a laboratory they find Holmes experimenting with a reagent seeking a test to detect human hemoglobin Holmes explains the significance of bloodstains as evidence in criminal trials Watson raises their parallel quests to find a place to live At Holmes's prompting the two review their various shortcomings to make sure that they can live together After seeing the rooms at 221B they move in and grow accustomed to their new situation Holmes reveals that he is a consulting detective and that his frequent guests are clients Facing Watson's doubts about some of his claims Holmes casually deduces to Watson that one visitor a messenger from Scotland Yard is also a retired Marine sergeant When the man confirms this Watson is astounded Original illustration of Holmes with magnifying glass by David Henry Friston

Left to right Watson Holmes Lestrade Gregson A telegram requests a consultation in a murder case Holmes is reluctant to help because credit would go entirely to the officials but Watson urges him to reconsider and at Holmes suggestion accompanies him to the crime scene an abandoned house Holmes observes the pavement and garden leading up to the house before he and Watson meet Inspectors Gregson and Lestrade The male corpse is identified as a wealthy man named Enoch Drebbler They also learn from documents found on his person that he was in London with his secretary Joseph Stangerson On one wall written in red is RACHE Holmes remarks that it is the German word for revenge He deduces that the victim died from poison and supplies a description of the murderer Holmes says RACHE was a ploy to fool the police Upon moving Drebbler's body they discover a woman's gold wedding ring Holmes and Watson visit the home of the constable who found the corpse and learn that a seemingly drunk loiterer had attempted to approach the crime scene Holmes reasons that the murderer returned on realising he'd forgotten the wedding ring Holmes dispatches some telegrams including an order for a newspaper notice about the ring He also buys a facsimile of it He guesses that the murderer having already returned to the scene of the crime for it would come to retrieve it The advertisement is answered by an old woman who claims that the ring belongs to her daughter Holmes gives her the duplicate follows her and returns to Watson later that night explaining that she took a cab he hopped onto the back of it and when it stopped he found that she had vanished This leads Holmes to believe that it was an accomplice in disguise
